KRAZY KAT "COW BELLES"

Produced by Charles B. Mintz Distributed by Paramount

Krazy Kat comes upon a bewailing farmer who tells him all his troubles. He tells him the live stock on the farm are discontented and refuse to produce. Krazy Kat tells him of the old adage of "music soothing the savage breast" and commences to prove his theory, with a saxophone.

The animals are charmed by this music and the cows again produce milk and the chickens lay more eggs. The farmer is elated and decides to have a big barn dance in honor of the occasion and invites the help.

Everybody is having a fine time until someone objects to Krazy Kat dancing with the belle of the farm and a fight starts. It becomes a free-for-all and all the help are bruised and hurt. The farmer then decides to throw the feline out and picks him up bodily and pitches him out.
